ment which prevailed in the South during the war, is being taught in every possible way yet. The sight of this old traitor, slobbering over the battle-flag of treason, was intended as an object lesson to impress the young with the wonderful zeal of the old traitors for their unholy cause. The greater impetus was given to this demonstration by the recent visit of Grover Cleveland to the South, and the manner of his coming. His conduct has been a continuous attempt to render service to his Southern masters. He saw no glory anywhere but among the Johnnies, and the Southern people hold to that idea. The only difference in the situations on the occasions of Jeff.'s visit last week, and the assemblage of Confederate veterans in the same place so many years ago, was that this time they did not have guns in their hands. The whole proceeding was disgraceful and insulting to the loyalty of the American people. It will be a great day for this country
